Scranton's Everhart Museum Gears Up for Tool-Themed Exhibition Opening September 26, 2008

Scranton – August 8, 2008: The Everhart Museum will open Tools in Motion: Work from the Hechinger Collection on September 26, 2008. The traveling exhibition, on loan from International Arts & Artists (IA&A), Washington, DC features more than 50 highlights from the collection of Washington, DC hardware-industry pioneer John Hechinger. This popular, family-friendly exhibition displays the amazing variety of 20th-century art that represents or incorporates tools and hardware.

Tools in Motion includes sculptures, photographs, and paintings by such artists as Arman, Ivan Chermayeff, Jim Dine, Ron English, Gints Grinbergs, Claes Oldenburg, and Jacob Lawrence and celebrates the ubiquity of tools in our lives with art that transforms utilitarian objects into fanciful works of beauty, surprise and wit. The exhibit will be on view at the Everhart Museum September 26 through December 22, 2008.

The ordinary becomes extraordinary in Tools in Motion as everyday objects take on a new life through transformation by the artist. A wide range of styles and themes make up the exhibit which honors the dignity of everyday tools. The works were selected from a collection originally owned and collected by the late hardware-industry pioneer, John Hechinger (1920-2004), whose father started the Hechinger hardware chain in 1911. Hechinger began collecting art that highlighted the family business in 1978 in order to decorate the company's "sterile" headquarters. Hechinger explained, "The building seemed to rebuke the fantasies that a hardware store inspires. For anyone whose passion is work with his or her own hands, a good hardware store is a spur to the imagination and a source of irresistible delights." It was only fitting that the collection that would decorate the headquarters reflect that passion and creativity. At one time there were 118 locations of Hechinger home improvement stores throughout the East and Midwest. By the 1990's Hechinger had collected more than 375 unique pieces of art which decorated the Hechinger Company until 1998 when they left their home to become part of a popular ongoing series at the National Building Museum in Washington DC. Today, a portion of the collection travels as "Tools in Motion: Works from the Hechinger Collection."

Complementing Tools in Motion is the Gallery One exhibition, Student Art at the Everhart: Fantasy Tools, which highlights the work of area students who created artworks inspired by their perfect fantasy tool. The schools involved in this exhibition include: Abington Heights Middle School and High School, Scranton High School, Audubon Elementary School, Prescott Elementary School, and Mountain View Elementary School. Gallery One exhibitions are collaborative efforts by which the Everhart Museum nurtures creativity and showcases artistic excellence in the community.

The Everhart Museum is open: noon-4:00 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Monday; 10:00 a.m.-5:00 p.m. on Saturday; and noon-5:00 p.m. on Sunday. Admission is $5/adults, $3/students & seniors, $2/children 6-12, and free to Everhart Museum members.
